The Deal Lawyer's Weapons in the War on COVID-19

By Samuel C. Thompson, Jr.

The Deal Lawyer's Weapons in the War on COVID-19 addresses several COVID-19–related legal issues a deal lawyer is likely to encounter in his or her practice, including, initiatives in the following areas: (1) benefits adopted by the CARES Act (for example, the Paycheck Protection Program), (2) financial assistance adopted by the Federal Reserve Board, (3) corporate and securities laws, (4) antitrust laws, (5) federal income tax, (6) regulation of cross-border transactions, (7) valuation of companies, (8) contract drafting, and (9) bankruptcy.

The Deal Lawyer's Weapons in the War on COVID-19 is a guide to many of the legal and economic issues faced by businesses in responding to the COVID-19 crisis. The purpose is not to attempt to be the final word on any topic; rather, the purpose is to give the reader an understanding of the basic legal and economic principles a deal lawyer is likely to face in advising clients on issues arising out of the COVID-19 crisis.
